In the event that they do, the bleeding could be intermittent. And based on where the cancer is in the colon, the blood might not even be obvious in the stool. Perhaps it is in part as a result of the difference in the volume of instances being identified that some doctors basically take into account that the existence of blood in the stool or rectal blood loss is due to hemorrhoids.

This Amounts in Order to Playing the Odds

A physician who reaches this conclusion will be proper more than 90% of the time. This indicates reasonable, doesn't it? The problem, nonetheless, is that if the physician is incorrect in this diagnosis, the patient may not discover he or she has colon cancer until it has progressed to an advanced period, possibly even to the point where treatment is no longer effective.

This is why doctors generally suggest that a colonoscopy ought to be ordered instantly if someone complains of blood in the stool or rectal bleeding. A colonoscopy is a procedure whereby a flexible scope with a camera on the end is used to start to see the interior of the colon. If growths (polyps or tumors) are detected, they can be taken out (if sufficiently small) or sampled and reviewed for the existence of cancer (by biopsy). Providing no cancer is detected during the colonoscopy may colon cancer be ruled out as a cause of the blood.

Sometimes the Best Things in Life are Not Popular

Think about the artistic work of Van Gogh, the conspiracy that is with his name did not materialize under over a hundred years after his death. The same thing with many remarkable inventions by that of the underground developer Nikola Tesla who developed AC circuitry. Furthermore, if you look at the independent music scenes, you'll notice many times that the best musicians are not always the famous ones. These are all examples of a very striking principle.

The Same Principle Applies for Hemorrhoid Treatment

Notice how many pharmaceutical remedies you will find in the supermarket, pharmacies, and other established places? Now, notice how many natural solutions are being shelved out there. Probably not a lot and even when they were, they are not presented in this way. The key to realize here is that big pharmaceutical companies have the capital to shell our own millions for advertising campaigns and broker distribution deals with grocery or department chains. Natural options simply do not get this type of media recognition because pharmaceutical corporations would just muscle all of them out with sheer economic might.

Within the realm of hemorrhoid treatment, you'll realize that most doctors easily recommend surgical removal and hardly try much more than a few creams which provide some mild relief in most cases. This does not always serve as a win-win for the patient.
